

What is claimed is:

1. In a method for synthesizing compounds from a large chemical library, the improvement which comprises partitioning the library into diversity spaces, analysing substituent frequency of substituents used to prepare chemical compounds in each diversity space and using the resulting analysis to select chemical compounds for synthesis.

2001-07-20/04001